	Approved For Release 2004/02/13 : CIA 250 P80-00810A002 500 620003-2
COUNTR
TOPIC	la Polial Troops and Military Installations in the /res of Werezaum and former German Headquarters near Restandance (V.
EVALUAT	2. Folish induction System and Polish Uniforms
	OCV4
DATE OF	BIAINED L DATE PREPARED 12 June 1953
REFERE	The second secon
PAGES_	2 ENCLOSURES (NO. & TYPE)
REMARK	是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人,我们就是
25X1
1.	Prior to September 1952, the large barracks installations in Jablonna Legionowo
	" TO STATE TO THE TANK THE PARTY OF THE ORDINARY TO STATE OF THE ORDINA
25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and rellow affects
	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story, red structures, which were
	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horsendraym yehicles as tween used by all retarding
	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations.
25X1 2. 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service colors. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the porth bark of
25X1 2. 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonne Legionowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stucced buildings. In the vicinity of the hillete
25X1 2. 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonne Legicnowo to Serock alarge barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stucced buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (P 53/K 21)
25X1 2. 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonne Legionowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stucced buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers wore red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River.
25X1 2. 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonne Legionowo to Serock allarge barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stucced buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers, wore red service color, Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers, wore red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 maters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers, were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 3.	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legionowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawa Siedlee (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38).
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 4. 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who wore red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legienowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers wore red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawe Siedlee (R 53/L 88) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38).
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	(R 53/F 02) were occupied by Polish soldiers, who were red and yellow service color. The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legionowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawa Siedlee (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38).
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 4. 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legionovo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stucceed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color, Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawa Siedlee (R 53/L 88) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38).
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers wore red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawa Siedlee (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38).
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorize troops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legionowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 maters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawe. Siedlee (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazewiecki (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and minsk/Mazewiecki (R 53/L 38). I large barracks installation of brick buildings both sides of the road to tublin (S 52/R 18) at the southeastern exit of Garwolin (R 53/L 45), Polish soldiers were near the barracks installation. In the summer of 1953, in the streets of Radom (R 52/Q 19), numerous soldier wore blue gray uniforms with black service color. On a drive between Zamosc (S 51/R 52) and Krasnystaw (S 51/R 55), a military installation in a woods of young firs, east of the road
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 maters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south soldiers were high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by soldiers were high, and two two-story brick buildings on the south sides of the warsawa - Siedle (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38). In the summer of 1953,
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 maters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warsawa Siedice (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38). Polish soldiers were paracks installation of brick buildings both sides of the road to bublin (S 52/R 18) at the southeastern exit of Garwolin (R 53/L 45), were yellow and red service color. Horse-drawn vehicles with tarpaulins were near the barracks installation. In the summer of 1953, in the streets of Radom (R 52/Q 19), numerous soldier wore blue gray uniforms with black service color. On a drive between Zamosa (S 51/R 52) and Krasnystaw (S 51/R 55), a military installation in a woods of young firs, east of the road installation was guarded by military sentries and along the edge of the woods, it was equipped with a wire entanglement, about 200 meters long. The former Fuehrer-Hauptquartier east of Rastenburg (R 55/A 29) was released to the
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizatroops for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers wore red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 meters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warszawa — Stedlee (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38). Iarge barracks installation of brick buildingson both sides of the road to bublin (S 52/R 18) at the southeastern exit of Garwelin (R 53/L 45), were policy and red service color. Horse-drawn vehicles with tarpaulins were near the barracks installation. In the summer of 1953, in the streets of Radom (R 52/Q 19), numberous soldier wore blue gray uniforms with black service color. On a drive between Zamosc (S 51/R 52) and Krasnystaw (S 51/R 55), a military installation in a woods of young firs, east of the road military sentries and along the edge of the woods, it was equipped with a wire entanglement, about 200 meters long. The former Fuehrer-Hauptquartier east of Rastenburg (R 55/A 29) was released to the public for inspection in the summer of 1951. The buildings were camibalized and the
25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1 25X1	The barracks installations were two or three story red structures, which were partitioned from the road by greens. Horse-drawn vehicles as were used by all motorizations for supply purposes were seen at the installations. On a drive from Jablonna Legicnowo to Serock a large barracks installation was under construction near Zegrze (P 53/X 25) on the north bank of Narew River and next to the old fortified defense system east of the road and which included not yet stuccoed buildings. In the vicinity of the billets Polish soldiers were red service color. Polish soldiers, who were blue-gray uniforms with black service color, were at the old fortified defense system in Modlin (R 53/K 71), directly northwest of the bridge over the Narew River. In the summer of 1952, a large radio installation, which included about 50 masts, about 20 maters high, and two two-story brick buildings, and was enclosed by barbed wire and was guarded by soldiers wearing red service color, was on the south side of the Warsawa Siedice (R 53/L 38) road between the towns of Debe Wielkie (R 53/L 38) and Minsk/Mazowiecki (R 53/L 38). Polish soldiers were paracks installation of brick buildings both sides of the road to bublin (S 52/R 18) at the southeastern exit of Garwolin (R 53/L 45), were yellow and red service color. Horse-drawn vehicles with tarpaulins were near the barracks installation. In the summer of 1953, in the streets of Radom (R 52/Q 19), numerous soldier wore blue gray uniforms with black service color. On a drive between Zamosa (S 51/R 52) and Krasnystaw (S 51/R 55), a military installation in a woods of young firs, east of the road installation was guarded by military sentries and along the edge of the woods, it was equipped with a wire entanglement, about 200 meters long. The former Fuehrer-Hauptquartier east of Rastenburg (R 55/A 29) was released to the

SECRET